

All-white jury acquits Angela Davis

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI)—An all-white jury acquitted Angela Davis of all charges against her Sunday and the black militant Communist went free to "resume the struggle against oppression."

The 28-year-old former UCLA professor was found innocent of any part in a conspiracy to take hostages from a San Rafael courthouse that led to the shotgun slaying of a judge and the killing of three other persons.

The seven-women, five-man jury found her innocent of each of the three counts of the indictment—murder, kidnapping and conspiracy—as a wild shriek of exhilaration went up from the spectators in the tiny courtroom.

When court clerk Art Vanek read the first "not guilty" on the kidnap charge, Miss Davis smiled broadly and said, "Gee!"

By the time he had read all three verdicts of innocent, members of the family were weeping and Angela ran back to embrace them.

Despite a chain of circumstantial evidence from 97 state witnesses, the jury found there was "reasonable doubt" that Angela knew of, or participated in, Jonathan Jackson's intervention in a San Rafael courtroom on Aug. 7, 1970, in an attempt to free his brother, George, and the other Soledad Brothers.

Superior Court Judge Harold Haley was killed by a shotgun blast to the head after he was led to a getaway van with the weapon taped to his neck.

After Judge Richard E. Arnason formally announced the defendant was free and that her bail of $102,500 was to be returned, the tall, slender Angela, wearing a bright print dress, walked out to an area outside the chain link fence of the courthouse complex to mingle with about 400 supporters waiting there.

"This is not only the happiest day of my life," she said, "but I am sure that all of the people who struggled for me across this country and around the world are aware that it is a symbol that we are going to free all political prisoners and the oppressed."

Miss Davis then held a brief news conference.

She was asked whether she would seek to return to her post as assistant philosophy instructor at UCLA from which she was fired by the Board of Regents.

"I haven't made any plans," she said. "I've been waiting for this day and now I can start making plans. This is my happiest day because it means this is now out of the way so I can resume the struggle against oppression."

Miss Davis was asked what she thought of her acquittal by an all-white American jury.

"I didn't think of them as part of the judicial system," she said.

"I thought of them as part of the people, people who have to be brought into the fight against injustice."

"If you are implying that my acquittal changes my mind about the American judicial system, then you are wrong. The fact of my acquittal means there was no fair trial at all. The only fair trial would have been no trial."

Angela's mother, Mrs. Sallye Davis, said the verdict had ended "22 months of total nightmare since Angela was first accused."

"We are grateful to the people of the world who engaged in this great struggle, not only to free our daughter but against oppression everywhere."

Diplomats negotiate with Algeria

U.S. tries to recover hijack ransom

ALGIERS (UPI)—U.S. Diplomats began negotiating with Algerian officials Sunday for the return of $500,000 ransom paid to a Black Panther party member and his blonde girlfriend who hijacked a passenger jetliner over the west coast of the United States and threatened to blow it up.

The hijackers, identified as William Holder, a 22-year-old Vietnam war veteran, and Katherine Mary Kerkow, 21, dropped out of sight after asking the Algerian government for political asylum.

The pair hijacked a Western Air Lines jetliner over Washington state Saturday by threatening the crew with what appeared to be a bomb, changing to a longer-range plane and collecting the ransom money, then flying 7,404 miles to Algiers.

It was the longest skyjack since Henry Lee Jackson commandeered a Braniff Airlines jet 7,500 miles from Texas to Buenos Aires a year ago.

Holder and Miss Kerkow were met at the Algiers airport by government officials and Eldridge Cleaver, the Black Panther leader who fled the U.S. and established a headquarters in this North African nation, and other Panthers.

At the Panthers white-walled villa on the heights overlooking Algiers harbor, callers were turned away. "We ain't discussing this case, man," one Panther told newsmen from a second floor balcony.

In the weekend's other hijacking developments, searches were mounted for missing ransom in two parachute-pirate cases. Law officers were out in force in the Nevada desert looking for $145,000 in ransom which disappeared after a hooded hijacker parachuted early Saturday from a United Air Lines 727. A suspect in the case, Robb D. Heady, 22-year-old Vietnam veteran was seized.

Algerian officials said they were "thoroughly investigating" Holder's request for political asylum, but wanted to be certain he was a genuine political refugee.

William Eagleton, chief of the U.S. interests section of the Swiss embassy, said negotiations for the return of the ransom money, handed over to the hijackers in $100, $50 and $20 bills, began almost immediately.

"We assume they will return the money," Eagleton said.

Hijacker won't tell where $303,000 is

MIAMI (UPI) — Authorities in Honduras and Miami were trying Sunday to find out what became of a $303,000 hijack ransom, although the man accused of taking the money a month ago has said, "you'll never see it again."

Frederick W. Hahneman was awaiting a hearing before a U. S. magistrate on charges he hijacked an Eastern Airlines plane May 5, received the money from the airline in Washington and then parachuted into a Honduran jungle.

Hahneman gave himself up at the U. S. embassy in the Central American country Saturday and was flown here by Eastern Airlines and FBI agents later in the day. Sgt. Earle Cole, a U. S. Marine stationed at the embassy, said Hahneman told him: "You can forget about the money. You'll never see it again."

Eastern Airlines spokesmen said they are continuing to search for the $303,000 and are confident it will be found.

"The investigation, so far as the money is concerned, is continuing and it is in the hands of the FBI," said William V. Howard, Eastern's vice president for industrial and personnel relations. "We are still looking and we have reason to be optimistic and hopeful."

Authorities said Hahneman, a 49-year-old electronics engineer, from Easton, Pa., was born in Honduras.

The Allentown Pa. Call-Chronicler quoted Sgt. Cole as saying Hahneman told him before the flight to Miami that he is dying of cancer of the liver.

Cole quoted Hahneman as saying he wanted "to do one last thing for Honduras," and was "fed up with the anarchy around the world and the suffering of the people of the world."

Eastern Airlines said it received a tip on the hijacker's identity a week ago and believed that led to his surrender Saturday.

"I think he felt the jig was up," said Howard.

Howard said the tipster's name will be kept secret, at his own request, but that he will get the $25,000 reward.

The airline official said the informant responded to a poster distributed throughout much of Central America. It included a composite drawing of the hijacker and offered the reward.

Candidates pledge support

LOS ANGELES — Humphrey and McGovern said they would support the nominee picked at Miami Beach. But Rep. Chisholm (D., N.Y.), Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty and Gov. Wallace's campaign manager reserved judgment on supporting the party's ticket. The five appeared on ABC's Issues and Answers. Before the broadcast began, a new California poll showed McGovern and President Nixon running even at 41 per cent each in the nation's most populous state. Humphrey trailed Nixon by eight points. While Humphrey and McGovern were busy campaigning in California, their political organizations have been waging the race in New Jersey, which also has a primary tomorrow. McGovern is favored to win the New Jersey balloting. (Details on page 2.)

Beef prices may go up again

BY NORMAN H. FISCHER
Dow Jones Ottaway News

CHICAGO — Don't look now, but beef prices are on the verge of surpassing the record peaks that provoked all the consumer furor in late winter.

In Omaha, prime steers sold for $35 a hundredweight late in last week, just 15 cents below the 21-year high set in January, but up from $34.75 in April. The average price of choice cattle at the Omaha yards is $36.60, equal to the January peak, the highest in more than 20 years, and up from $34.10 in April. In Chicago, choice wholesale beef sells for 58 cents a pound, up five cents from the April low.

Ironically, these rebounds were in process even as government officials were crowing two weeks ago that the average U.S. retail beef price in April dropped to $1.12 a pound, from the February-March peak of nearly $1.16, the first drop in five months. Consumers haven't yet been hit with these latest near record quotes because, meatmen say, it generally takes a couple of weeks for retail prices to reflect wholesale market increases. They acknowledge, though, that the cooled issue of high meat prices could boil over again.

Prices may even creep a bit higher to new records in the next week or so, some experts warn.

East Stroudsburg resident killed in auto accident

MILFORD — An East Stroudsburg resident is dead and his companion in fair condition at St. Francis Hospital in Port Jervis, N.Y. after an early morning auto crash near Milford Sunday.

Terry W. Cramer, 20, of Park St., East Stroudsburg, was pronounced dead at the scene about three miles south of Milford Borough on Route 209 by Pike County Deputy Coroner Duncan Stroyan at approximately 3:30 a.m. Sunday.

The passenger in Cramer's auto was identified as John W. Bishop, also 20, of Brookside Ave., East Stroudsburg.

Pennsylvania State Police from the Milford barracks said Cramer's car was traveling south on Rt. 209 when it left the highway for an unknown reason. The vehicle struck a utility pole and then traveled into a wooded area, finally striking a tree.

Terry W. Cramer

Police are still trying to determine the cause of the accident.

Born in East Stroudsburg, Cramer was the son of Glenn and Florence (Dowell)

Cramer. He was a lifetime resident of East Stroudsburg and was a 1971 graduate of East Stroudsburg High School.

He was employed as an iron worker with the Bala Erector Company of Philadelphia.

In addition to his parents, he is survived by a sister, Elaine Cramer, of Stroudsburg and a brother, Bruce, of East Stroudsburg. Also his maternal grandfather, Link Dowell, of Bradford, and his paternal grandmother, Mrs. Violet Price, of Cresco.

Funeral services will be held at 11 a.m. Wednesday from the Lanterman Funeral Home, 27 Washington St., East Stroudsburg with Rev. E.G. Jack officiating. Interment will be in the Stroudsburg Cemetery.

Viewing will be held between 7 p.m. and 9 p.m. Tuesday from the Funeral home.

Angela rejoices over jury verdict

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI)—For Angela Davis, it was "the happiest day of my life"—and she showed it.

As court clerk Art Vanek read the first "not guilty" verdict Sunday, the 28-year-old black militant said, "Gee!", then threw her arms around Kendra Alexander, who was sitting beside her. They hugged and pummeled each other as Vanek read through 13 innocent verdicts.

After Judge Richard E. Arnason dismissed the jury, Miss Davis ran to attorney Leon Branton Jr., and threw her arms around him, then rushed into the audience for tearful embraces with her mother, father and other family members.

When she got outside the courtroom, the former UCLA philosophy instructor thanked 400 of her supporters through the mesh of a security screen. "I want to thank all who have struggled so long and so hard," she said. "You know there will be many, many more sweet victories for the people."

Then Angela Davis drove off with her family and close friends for a few minutes of private rejoicing before returning to the Santa Clara County Courthouse to meet the press.

She entered a basement press room and a half-hour later as the seven women and five men on the jury were filing out after their own news conference.

Miss Davis put her arms around them one by one, kissing the women on the cheek and giving the men a hug. With a throaty chuckle, she said to each: "Thank you very much."

The jurors—a seeming cross-section of white suburban America—responded with "congratulations" and "good luck to you."

After a lengthy political statement was read by her sister, Mrs. Fania Jordan, Miss Davis sat down with a smile behind a bank of microphones.

"You can see from the celebration already going on around you how my family and I feel," she said.

"I'm happy that I can now give all I have to the struggle against oppression and to free all political prisoners."

Trial judge commends jury

SAN JOSE, Calif. (UPI)—Judge Richard E. Arnason Sunday commended the Angela Davis jury on their deliberations and read them a quotation from "The Twelve Men" by G. K. Chesterton:

"Our civilization has decided, and very justly decided, that determining the guilt or innocence of men is a thing too important to be entrusted to trained men. If it wishes for light on that awful matter, it asks men who know no more law than I know, but who can feel the things I felt in a jury box."

"When it wants a library catalogue, or the solar system discovered, or any trifle of that kind, it uses its specialists. But when it wishes anything done that is really serious, it collects 12 of the ordinary men standing about."

"The same thing was done, if I remember right, by the founder of Christianity."

Business taxes expected to increase at slower rate

By FREDERICK ANDREWS

Dow Jones-Ottaway News Service

NEW YORK — State and local taxes on business are soaring.

That's hardly a surprise, but this may be: In the 1970s, they aren't likely to shoot up as frantically as they have in the recent past.

Experts say that spending by states and localities is slowing, though it still romps well ahead of overall economic growth. And the states and localities, though taxing business as never before, are relying more heavily on taxes that hit individuals the hardest. Thus, business will probably provide a declining share of total state and local taxes in coming years.

If the rash of new taxes and higher taxes on business is indeed about to ease, one reason is that the states made last year their biggest tax-writing binge on record. Because of lackluster tax collections from a slow economy, the states put more than $5 billion in new or higher taxes on the books. That round amounted to a 10 per cent increase in overall collections.

Not all of that burden fell on business, but a lot of it did. A dozen states boosted rates on corporate income taxes. After fierce political fights, two long-time holdouts — Florida and Ohio — became the 44th and 45th states to levy corporate income taxes. Three or four years ago, Sperry Rand Corp. budgeted 4.5 per cent as the average state corporate income rate. Recently, the company boosted the planning figure to six per cent — a 33 per cent increase in less than four years.

Significant tax

Some businessmen have shrugged off state income taxes as insignificant, but in many states that's no longer true. Minnesota raised its rate to 12 per cent last year, Pennsylvania is at 11 per cent, and Ohio's new tax was pegged at eight per cent. New York State levies nine per cent and New York City adds 6.7 per cent, to make a total of 15.7 per cent for a corporation in New York City.

The states and localities are pressing other measures, too. Minnesota no longer allows corporations to deduct federal taxes on their state return. Kentucky recently took the same step. Many tax jurisdictions are repealing certain exemptions from sales taxes previously enacted for businesses. According to John F. Burditt, chairman of ACF Industries Inc., state and local taxes are the company's fastest growing cost. They are going up about 20 per cent a year.

Then why expect any letup? For one thing, states and localities may no longer be as desperate for new taxes as is commonly believed. Elsie M. Watters, director of state and local research for the Tax Foundation, a nonprofit research group, disputes the conventional view that spending by states and localities has badly outstripped their ability to raise money. "If you say it enough, everybody believes it," she declares, but she doesn't believe it.

Tax Foundation projections for the 1970s don't predict a rosy financial future, but they don't point to a fiscal crisis either. The foundation reckons that taxes already on the books would raise enough in the 1970s to cover anticipated spending by state and local governments and even leave a slight surplus.

By Miss Watters' calculations, the present revenue structure, without tax increases or new federal aid like revenue sharing, would yield $323.55 billion in 1980, up from $130.76 billion in 1970. She also projects an increase in state and local spending from $131.33 billion in 1970 to $309.27 billion in 1980, or $14 billion less than anticipated revenues.

Obviously the foundation's projections don't mean a moratorium on tax increases. "We can be certain that as surpluses threaten, imaginative minds will find abundant ways to spend them," Miss Watters declares. But the projections do suggest that the state and local revenue structure will be under less strain.

According to the Tax Foundation, the explosive growth in spending by states and localities is over. Such outlays spurted as much as 14 per cent annually in recent years, twice as fast as the overall economy. That spending rate should fall back to 10 per cent in the first half of the 1970s and to eight per cent after that, the foundation figures. For the first time in decades, school enrollments should level off. Also, the "exorbitant" increases in welfare spending (more than 18 per cent a year) are unlikely to continue, foundation experts say.

And while taxes are going up, those that fall mainly on business are going up more slowly than others. That promises tax relief for business at least compared with what individuals pay. The property tax, a major item on a company's tax bill, is steadily declining in importance. It remains the single biggest revenue-producer ($41.31 billion last year), but it now accounts for only one-quarter of total state and local monies. Ten years ago, it accounted for one-third.

Lieutenant governor assumes governorship

Wallace to lose office — temporarily

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (UPI) — Unless Gov. George C. Wallace makes a surprise return from his Maryland hospital bed, Lt. Gov. Jere Beasley assumes the governorship of Alabama at 12:01 a.m. today.

The Alabama State Constitution provides that the lieutenant governor will assume the post if a governor has been out of state for more than 20 days. Wallace would resume control of the state under the law as soon as he returns to Alabama.

The last time the constitutional requirement was invoked was in 1967 when Lt. Gov. Albert P. Brewer took the governor's powers for a few hours while the late Gov. Lurleen Wallace was confined to a Texas hospital.

Wallace has been in Holy Cross Hospital at Silver Spring, Md., since he was shot May 15 during a political rally at a Laurel, Md., shopping center.

An aide said Beasley would meet with newsmen around midday today if it became necessary for him to assume the governorship.

"I don't plan to move into the governor's office," Beasley said. "I don't plan to make any changes. I'll be in touch with the governor."

"I'll cooperate fully with the administration."

Beasley and Wallace, once close political allies who claim the same home town of Clayton, began feuding shortly after they took office in 1971.

Beasley, during an absence from his duties as presiding officer of the state Senate last year, tried to keep a strong Wallace supporter from acting as temporary presiding officer.

In reprisal, Wallace cut back Beasley's office staff and took away his state trooper chauffeur.

The feud appeared to have been smoothed over after the attempt May 15 on Wallace's life when Beasley pledged his support to Wallace and his presidential campaign.

However, shortly after that Wallace's public safety director removed a state trooper assigned to Beasley for protection after the governor was wounded. Although Beasley's aides said the lieutenant governor's life had been threatened, Col. Walter Allen said he felt there was no security risk.

McGovern, Humphrey to support chosen nominee

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Hubert H. Humphrey and George S. McGovern Sunday promised their support to the winner of the Democratic presidential nomination but Shirley Chisholm said she could not give a "blank check" pledge in advance.

Without hesitation, Humphrey and McGovern, the two leading candidates for the nomination, said they would rally behind the winner at next month's Democratic National Convention.

But Mrs. Chisholm and Los Angeles Mayor Sam Yorty held back and retired Army Gen. Taylor Hardin, a personal representative of George C. Wallace, said the decision "is personal to him (Wallace) and one that only he can answer."

Asked if Wallace, partially paralyzed by a would-be assassin's bullets, would support President Nixon, Harding replied "I cannot conceive of that happening."

They appeared on the third and last of the "debates" preceding California's June 6 primary where the winner gets all 271 delegate votes.

Mrs. Chisholm, Yorty, and Hardin appeared on the program (ABC's Issues and Answers) after a federal court order that Mrs. Chisholm be given equal time because she was excluded from the first two debates.

Humphrey said he would support the nominee because "I think it's of utmost importance there be a change." McGovern said his inclination was to support the winner and said he would be "the person most broadly representative of the Democratic party."

Personality profile

Angela Davis was shy girl

By United Press International

Angela Yvonne Davis was an aloof, shy girl in her childhood and young womanhood and that remoteness was evident even after she became the center of a storm of controversy climaxed by a trial watched around the world.

In her 13 weeks in the courtroom, the slender, 28-year-old black intellectual seemed almost apart from the proceedings though it was her own freedom that was at stake.

Although given court permission to act as her own attorney, she spoke out only twice, once to deliver an opening statement and the second time to briefly cross-examine and disqualify a witness as prejudiced. Other than that, she leaned against the court railing, her face almost always blank and impassive.

This ability to withdraw into a shell while retaining the ability to speak out articulately at will was one of her most striking traits.

Angela Davis was born Jan. 26, 1944, in Birmingham, Ala., the eldest of four children of Frank and Sallye Davis. Frank Davis had taught in the public schools for eight years but retired to open a gasoline station the year after Angela was born. Mrs. Davis, who has a master's degree from New York University, was and still is a public school teacher.

The girl showed precociousness from the age of 3 when her mother started her on piano lessons. She made straight A's in high school and was drum majorette for the Rams football team at Parker High School.

When only 15, she got a grant to attend the Elisabeth Irwin School in New York's Greenwich Village, a "progressive" experimental institution where she found the going much tougher. French was her most difficult subject and she displayed her staunchness of character by making that her major.

In New York she lived with Dr. William Howard Melish, a white Protestant minister, his wife and their three sons. It was the beginning of a period of eight years in which Angela's contacts were almost exclusively with whites.

She went on to Brandeis University outside Boston, again making top grades, and spent her junior year on an exchange program at the Sorbonne in Paris. In her senior year she became engrossed in the theories of New Left philosopher Herbert Marcuse and took all the courses he offered.

Marcuse persuaded her to go to Germany to study for two years at the Karl Marx Institute of Johann Wolfgang von Goethe University in Frankfurt.

During that period she had a brief love affair with a young white German student which finally broke off under the disapproval of both sets of parents.

In 1967 Angela went to the University of California at San Diego to study for her Ph.D. under Marcuse and, for the first time, became involved with black activists on the campus.

In 1969 she was hired as assistant professor in the Philosophy Department at the University of California in Los Angeles. During that same year, she had joined the Che Lumumba branch of the Communist Party in Los Angeles and that came to the attention of the university regents.

They fired Miss Davis, but a Superior Court judge ruled that dismissal solely on grounds she was a Communist was illegal and ordered her reinstated. She taught through the fall of 1969 and into the spring of 1970 when the regents voted to refuse to renew her contract because of improper outside activities.

It was in the spring of 1970, angered by what she considered her "persecution" by the regents, that she first met George Jackson in a Salinas, Calif., courtroom and her fervent activities in behalf of the Soledad Brothers began.

Governors cite need for veep from South

HOUSTON (UPI) — Democratic governors attending the National Governors Conference said Sunday if Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., wins his party's presidential nomination, it would be "absolutely essential" that he select a running mate from the South in order to defeat President Nixon in November.

Democratic presidential politics dominated the opening day of the conference, as backers of Sen. McGovern, Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., and Gov. George Wallace of Alabama maneuvered for support among the 30 Democratic governors.

Most governors thought McGovern, if he wins the California primary Tuesday, would capture the nomination.

Gov. Dale Bumpers of Arkansas, who is supporting Rep. Wilbur Mills, D-Ark., for president, said failure to select a southern vice presidential running mate would be politically "devastating" to the party in the South.

"If McGovern is the nominee," Bumpers stressed, "it is absolutely essential to have a southern running mate."

Gov. Warren Hearnes of Missouri, who has expressed reservations about McGovern's position on defense cuts and income redistribution, said Wallace's primary victories before he was shot showed his position on the issues had struck a "responsive chord" within the electorate.

"Why can't they accept Wallace as a running mate?" Hearnes asked. "We cannot ignore the issues—busing and tax reform—which he has raised!"

Teachers learn to 'read' to help elementary pupils

By MAUREEN RUFE
Pocono Record Reporter

BROOKHAVEN — If you want to know how a first grader feels when it's time for his daily reading lesson, read on.

In order to feel like a first grader again — you simply have to read through one paragraph in this story as quickly and as comprehensively as possible.

The "catch" is that the paragraph is upside down. You will have to read it from bottom to top, from right to left, and you will not be able to recognize any of the letters in the words as you now perceive them.

Your habitual reading patterns will be broken down and you will be placed in the same situation as a first grader confronting a reading situation in the early part of his educational career.

Reading test
Now, read the next paragraph and remember — NO CHEATING: Take your time and try to understand what the paragraph says.

Suppose you are a first grader and you are taking a reading test. The teacher is standing over you and you are feeling nervous. You are trying to read the words but you are not sure you are reading them correctly. You are feeling like a first grader again.

Are you exhausted? Did you understand what you read? According to Dr. Elizabeth Harvilla, professor of education and a reading specialist at Kutztown College, the test is exasperating and few people are able to understand what they read when the material is upside down.

Readers try so hard to identify words that they can't concentrate on content. Many people need to follow words with their fingers and need to pause when they come to a word they don't know. In short, with this test, most people make the same mistakes first graders do. If asked to read an upside down paragraph orally, participants usually shudder in fear over the prospect of fumbling over the material. Again, the situation parallels that of some first graders.

Tell tale groceries

By MAUREEN RUFE
Pocono Record Reporter

GILBERT — After reading this column, you may decide to look for one of those all night supermarkets, where you can shop in privacy at 3 a.m. in the morning.

That is, if you think you happen to be one of those people who buys "tell tale groceries!" A few weeks ago a psychologist friend of mine suggested that in order to tell how a family is made up, what its values are, or how it lives, all you have to do is watch their groceries coming down the check-out counter each week.

At first I laughed off his suggestion as a far-out theory that had no substance at all. Then, this week, as I watched my groceries line up, I realized in horror that what I had selected, did reflect my personality, my family, and in fact my whole way of life.

I watched a few other customers as they were checking out and instantly I was able to size up their lives.

Case number one was a neatly dressed young woman with tired eyes and haggard hair. She was alone and did not give me a clue as to whether or not she had a family.

When I saw the groceries — I knew instantly. I remember chocolate covered cereals, kool-aid, a large package of Pampers, lots of fruit and small cookies. Giant jars of peanut butter and jelly paraded down the line with an endless amount of baby food jars. There were five jungle food T.V. dinners, which surely gave her away.

Last but not least, dog yummys, cat food, and a parakeet bell told the complete story. No wonder she looked haggard!

Case number two had a small order and seemed to be buying everything for one. I suspected, and quite rightly so, however, that in the near future she would be entertaining a special young caller.

Two prime delmonico steaks, two frozen cheese stuffed potatoes, spinach souffle enough for two, two shrimp cocktails in glasses, and a box of frozen tarts.

Case three was a real gourmet if I ever saw one. Artichoke hearts and anchovies and fresh mushrooms came through the checker first. Some odd spices I never heard of flashed by me and I remember seeking smoked oysters in her pile somewhere.

Several boxes of cocktail mixers came barreling through, melba toast, cooking sherry and all the basics you rarely see coming down the line these days — flour, baking powder, Crisco, etc.

Number four only contained a small order and the elderly woman and her husband obviously were on pensions. No fancy foods for them — potatoes, meats, fresh carrots. And most typical, I remember seeing the giant economy sizes of Geritol, Pepto-Bismal and Dentu Cream.

I truly felt for my last subject, who was the easiest of all to discern. Obviously a young bachelor who had better things to do, he came through the line loaded down with 10 frozen T.V. dinners.

In my brief encounter, I found that I could actually tell quite a lot about people by the groceries they buy.

Now I find myself wondering if anybody is sizing me up. I'm afraid to buy a frozen pie, for fear my secret will become public.

What I really want to know is does anybody know of an all-night grocery in the area?

Special training

Dr. Elizabeth Harvilla instructs Pleasant Valley teachers in special reading program. From left are Dr. Harvilla, Harry Blood, Larry Court, and William Morris.

It was one upside down reading test like the above that Dr. Harvilla used to present a special in-service reading seminar to seven Pleasant Valley school teachers on Friday at the Chestnuthill Elementary School.

Special seminar
The day-long seminar was presented to prepare teachers who will be heading up a summer corrective reading program for children in grades one to seven.

The course, which will run five weeks and will include field trips to Lost Cave, Quiet Valley Farm, Pocono International Raceway and Philadelphia Zoo, begins today.

Teachers participating in the summer session are Mary Jane Reed, John McMaisters, Karen Rinker, Linda Wentzel, William Morris, Mrs. Mary Jane Wicks, and Larry Court.

According to Elementary

Principal Harry Blood, 69 children are now enrolled in the summer program, which is designed to develop the attitude of the poor reader through the use of creative ideas.

Record reactions
On field trips, for example, the children's reactions will be taped on a portable recorder. Later the conversations will be transcribed and the children will be asked to read their own conversations.

"When used properly," said Blood, "field trips can be a great spirit in building reader interest."

Dr. Harvilla, a humanist teacher, believes that teachers should "learn with children," not "teach to them."

Her philosophy is based on love and concern for children as the first priority and love of materials as second.

"You must allow children the freedom to express themselves in whatever way they want," said the Kutztown educator. "You as teachers must steer them in the right direction and give them the right books at the right time."

Concern for child
"My concern is for the child," she continued. "I want to accept him and I want him to accept me."

Dr. Harvilla placed emphasis on reading for content and ideas rather than reading for facts. She emphasized the USSR (Uninterrupted Sustained Silent Reading) is very effective in building reading skill.

Under such a program, the teacher as well as the student, reads (silently) a book of his choice for a specific period of time and is not interrupted under any circumstances.

In one elementary school, the program is so successful that all the classes, the teachers and even the custodians read during the USSR period. When a visitor stops at the school during USSR, he is given a book to read until the session is over.

Local home rule discussed by Eldred Twp. supervisors

KUNKLETOWN — A discussion about possible adoption of local home rule was the main point of business at the Eldred Township Supervisors' meeting Saturday morning.

Chairman Adam Meckes, referring to a letter he received from the state, said there were several ways in which the new laws could be adopted.

According to Meckes, the matter could be decided by the voters through normal ordinance procedure, or the supervisors, themselves, could rule on the matter.

The topic was tabled until a later date.

Meckes also reported on the township's planning commission meeting, which was held May 25.

He said a local subdivision ordinance was approved by the commission and would be presented to the supervisors at the next board meeting.

The board also discussed changes made in local sewerage regulations, which recently were passed by the state legislature.

A brief discussion was also held on the status of the proposed West End Park takeover by three townships in the West End. Since Eldred had not received a written tentative proposal on the matter from the county, the supervisors decided they could not take further action on this matter.

Revenue sharing in trouble on many fronts

By DONALD R. LARRABEE
Ottawa News Service
Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Revenue sharing, a concept that almost everyone embraces in principle, is in trouble in the House of Representatives despite a massive lobbying effort by governors, mayors, and other local politicians who usually are persuasive with Congress.

Speaker Carl Albert D-Okla., sensing that the $30 billion Nixon-Mills program could not muster the necessary votes, has delayed a showdown for a week or two until key members of both Parties can devise a magic formula that will satisfy the disparate blocs of opponents. Many are dubious that it can be done.

A few weeks ago, Ways and Means Chairman Wilbur Mills D-Ark. thought he had come up with a winning compromise. He agreed to the White House insistence on a program of temporary help to state and local governments, with no strings attached. In turn, the White House agreed that most of the benefits under any such program should go to urban areas which were most in need of funds. Both sides agreed that Uncle Sam, under the plan, would collect state income taxes for the states.

The idea of revenue sharing has been bandied about since 1964 when it appeared there would be huge Federal surpluses generated by the then-booming economy. These surpluses no longer exist, of course, what with the escalating costs of Vietnam and the general inflationary pattern.

But the idea is one that has refused to go away completely because local governments are so desperately in need of extra cash to meet their increased costs of operation. Under pressure from home, most members of Congress continue to give lip service to revenue sharing.

The bill, as it emerged from Mills' Committee, would give Pennsylvania $300.9 million a year for the next five years, of which $202.5 million would go to local governments.

The only mandate to local authorities is that they must use the money for such "high priority" purposes as new sewage collection and treatment systems, refuse disposal and public transportation and for operating expenses involved in public safety, environmental protection and public transportation.

The opposition to the plan before the House is now surfacing.

It is rooted in (1) deepening annual Federal deficits; (2) serious reservations by some lawmakers as to whether their own states would get their fair share of the funds allocated under the formula; (3) the prospect that more power will become centralized in Washington as the states become increasingly dependent upon the Federal government for their own tax efforts; and (4) the absence of adequate controls over the funds to be spent.

A new wrinkle — and an immensely significant one — was added when the Appropriations Committee, which traditionally hands out the money in Congress, decided almost to a man that Mills' Ways and Means Committee is usurping its historic function. Ways and Means is supposed to raise revenues, not allocate them for spending.

The Mills-Nixon bill is in trouble mostly because it upsets the sensitivities of some of the most powerful people in the House who sense that Congress is abdicating its responsibility to oversee and control Federal spending programs. As they see it, Congress would be surrendering its control over the purse strings.

Chairman George Mahon D-Tex. of the appropriations committee is outraged. He says the Nation is in bad financial shape and the Mills bill would make it worse. He argues that there are Federal grant programs now in existence which give state and local governments $43 billion in the next fiscal year. In Mahon's view, additional billions, automatically distributed, with no check by Congress, will lead to fiscal disaster.

Beyond this, the fiscal giants in Congress apparently fear that once state and local governments have incorporated the shared Federal revenues into their budgets, there will be increasing pressure for larger shares and concurrent opposition to any reduction in the program. In short, they feel that if matters are left to local administrators, Congress will find itself over the barrel. This argument, of course, ignores the power of Congress to undo anything it has done.

The House leadership, hoping for some much-needed political help when the President returns from his travels, may decide to open the bill to amendments which would give Congress more control over the way the shared revenues are spent.

But the betting is heavy that revenue sharing will fall by the wayside because it creates too many uncertainties in a time of fiscal and perhaps political upheaval.

Can't have it both ways

It is becoming increasingly obvious that the growing need for electric power cannot be reconciled with demands by environmentalists to cut back drastically on harnessing of natural resources.

The choice is rapidly coming to fewer of the amenities of 20th Century technology or continuing use of natural resources to provide the power for those amenities. The question is, how many people are prepared to forego the multiplicity of appliances we enjoy for the vital and esthetic values of a clean and untouched environment.

As far as the vital aspects of a clean environment are concerned, we don't see too much choice there. Clean air and water are more than just nice to have; they are necessary to our continued existence in many cases.

Our choice

But as far as the esthetics are concerned, we may have to reconcile ourselves to seeing a few more of our wild streams harnessed and a few more power plants dotting our landscape... that is, if we want to continue expanding our use of television sets, home appliances, air conditioners, electric heat, etc.

The dilemma comes pretty close to home here in northeastern Pennsylvania. The power needed in the so-called East Coast megalopolis within the next four or five years will have to come in great part from the power network outlined in the master siting study released a while back by the Delaware River Basin Commission — 11 nuclear power plants and a host of conventional plants or additions to existing conventional plants.

The kicker there is that those plants, particularly the nuclear facilities, need the water reserve from the proposed Tocks Island Dam and from six to 21 lesser dams to function. There are other reasons for building the Tocks Dam, of course, among them water needs of New York, Trenton, Newark and Philadelphia; recreation needs of millions of urbanites and flood protection needs of people from Easton to Philadelphia.

What alternatives?

But the need for power is inextricably tied in with the Tocks Dam and Reservoir. Those who oppose building the dam have many arguments to offer, mostly revolving around the environmental esthetics of leaving the Delaware a free-flowing river. Very well; but what are the alternatives they propose for the needs that created the Tocks plan in the first place?

We suggest that the next time some Tocks opponent feels the urge to speak out against the project, he or she come armed with alternative methods of providing the needed power, water, recreational facilities and flood control.

If no such alternatives are available, we suggest Tocks opponents think a bit longer before rushing to the ever-popular environmental altar with their ready sacrifices. For the sacrifices they make will be their own, and we seriously doubt most Tocks opponents are ready to make them.

'Celler door'

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The venerable, 84-year-old dean of the House, Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N.Y., has become a bit careless about promoting his pocketbook interests in Congress.

For 50 years, he has shuffled papers and switched nameplates to separate his law practice from his congressional actions. But this hasn't prevented him apparently, from tending the cash register of a multi-million-dollar conglomerate on Capitol Hill.

The conglomerate, Fischbach and Moore, does electrical work for power plants, industrial facilities, office buildings and other installations. It has received government contracts for a variety of projects, ranging from the FBI's vast new headquarters in Washington to anti-ballistic missile sites in North Dakota.

Repeatedly, Celler has put his power and prestige on the line in favor of projects that would benefit Fischbach and Moore. In promoting these projects, however, he hasn't mentioned that he has a financial stake in the company. He has served, off and on, as a director, and his law firm does legal work for the company.

There was a big brouhaha in the 1960s, for example, over Consolidated Edison's construction of a nuclear generating plant at Buchanan, N.Y., and a hydroelectric plant at Cornwall, N.Y. Celler rose to the defense of Con Ed.

"The Cornwall plant," he declared, "has been attacked as an invasion of the scenic beauty of the Hudson... I have grave doubts as to whether or not there will be any invasion of the beauty of the Hudson. Nor is scenic beauty a sacred cow to be worshipped at all and any cost."

As for those who opposed the nuclear plant, Celler snorted: "These are the same skeptics who, in the 15th century, warned Columbus not to set out on his voyage to India which finally led him to America. These are the same skeptics who, in 1888, said the Brooklyn Bridge would fall down. These are the same skeptics that denigrated Kitty Hawk and flying machines, and these are the same skeptics who scoff at our efforts to reach the moon."

Celler omitted the fact that Con Ed had contracted with Fischbach and Moore to do the electrical work.

In 1969, Celler helped rally a close House vote in favor of the anti-ballistic missile system. "The gamble is too great, the awesome risk too much to bear" if the ABM system is not constructed, he told the House gravely.

He neglected to mention that his favorite conglomerate would help with the construction.

Celler and Lockheed

Again in 1971, Celler supported the controversial $250 million loan to Lockheed Corp. "I think Lockheed is worth saving!" he cried. He pointed out that "in my own state, there are suppliers on subcontracts involving over $67.5 million."

He discretely didn't mention that Fischbach and Moore was one of the subcontractors.

Celler has voted for military construction that included electrical contracts from Fischbach and Moore. As House Judiciary Chairman, Celler also has jurisdiction over the FBI which, perhaps coincidentally, awarded Fischbach and Moore the electrical contract for the new J. Edgar Hoover building.

All the while, Celler has put on a great show of abstaining, in the name of ethics, from handling private law cases before the federal government. What he has done for ethics, however, is required by law. It happens to be a federal violation for Congressmen to take fees in federal cases.

The door to Celler's law layout displays two signs. One identifies the firm of Weisman, Celler, Allan, Spett and Scheinberg. The other omits Celler's name. All cases involving the government are assigned to the firm without his name.

A prospective client might have difficulty, however, in distinguishing between the two firms. Both have the same telephone number. Indeed, they share furniture and fixtures as well as phones. While they keep separate books and bank accounts, the same staff is used by both firms.

Footnote: The kindly Celler told us he had been guilty of no conflicts and would swear so "on a stack of Bibles." Our charges, he said, were "contemptuously false." When we compared his past statements with the Fischbach and Moore contracts, he insisted that he had been unaware of any connection.

Washington whirl

Running Mates — Sen. George McGovern has told campaign aides that, if he wins the Democratic nomination, he won't choose any of the top presidential contenders for a running mate. His first choice, if he could get him, would be Sen. Ted Kennedy. Other possibilities he has mentioned: Florida's Gov. Reuben Askew, Illinois' Sen. Adlai Stevenson, Indiana's Sen. Birch Bayh and Idaho's Sen. Frank Church. Sen. Hubert Humphrey, in contrast, has indicated he would like McGovern as a running mate.

Harlem Hero — Rep. Charles Rangel, D-N.Y., worried about drug addiction in his Harlem district, has privately asked Central Intelligence Director Richard Helms for 10 studies the CIA has made on world-wide drug routes to the U.S. When Helms declined, Rangel served notice he would invoke the Freedom of Information Act.

Milton J. Shapp

The Pennsylvania Story

Ship of State

HARRISBURG — Gov. Milton J. Shapp has steered the old Keystone State Ship of State through some uncharted waters during the past year and it now looks as though the ship and all of its crew will come through — without the hint of mutiny!

The mutiny, of course, is the new power to strike that the state employees have received since the passage of the Public Employees Relations Act, enabling workers to organize and join unions.

In just about a year's time some 60,000 state employees have become dues paying union members. Most of the unions have now gone through one round of collective bargaining with the state and are now, for the first time, working under contract.

In addition, some 20 to 30,000 more employees will elect union membership before the end of the current year, bringing the total number of state employees eligible to collectively bargain contracts to nearly 90,000.

Impossible done — And although it was considered nearly impossible a year ago, all of this has been accomplished with virtually no interruption to the normal services of the state.

In all of the bargaining there has been a total of one day lost to strike. This one-day walkout, which was not sanctioned by the union leadership, was conducted by only a small portion of the membership of one union.

To accomplish all of this the Commonwealth bargainers have not had to give up an arm and a leg. The contract concessions which the state has made have not been outlandish; as a matter of fact, they have helped the state raise their pay scale to a level where the state can compete with private industry in an attempt to hire the most qualified personnel for the jobs available.

At the beginning many people, both inside and outside government circles, worried that the much experienced union leaders would be able to back the inexperienced state bargainers into a corner and then force great concessions out of them.

But under the leadership of Chris Zervanos, director of the Bureau of Labor Relations, and Thomas Lane, chief negotiator for the Commonwealth and one of the framers of the act establishing the right of employees to join unions, the Commonwealth has proven to be a good match for the unions at the bargaining table.

Good faith

The unions have also shown their good faith in the bargaining procedure, exhibiting a willingness to stay at the bargaining table and never forcing an issue to a general strike.

The one-day walkout that did occur was as much an inter-union struggle as it was a strike against the state, with union members crossing their own picket lines to go to work. The strike was quickly resolved with no great loss of service to the public.

So far, the state has been able to stick with a fairly standard contract; it has offered the unions 2.5 per cent salary increases across the life of the contract and the total payment by the state of the employees Blue Cross, Blue Shield and the state life insurance.

There have been small differences in the contracts in regard to overtime pay and shift differential, but for the most part going into the second year of collective bargaining all of the unions will be starting out on an equal basis.

Since the increases granted the workers are in excess of the federal wage guidelines, the state has been quick to point out that all contracts are subject to review by the Federal Pay Board.

In all, the conversion from patronage to unionism has been much more successful than most expected only a year ago.

The rational approach and intelligence which both sides of the table have exhibited throughout this past year will hopefully be a preview of what we can expect from two camps with such great responsibilities to the people of Pennsylvania.

Formula preempts TV

Time and the acceleration of events have caught television newscasts in a vise. The tube carries the same cheerful, aging faces — Cronkite, Reasoner, Chancellor, Seavard — but the words are stale and the pitch is superficial. Worse, the networks predict events which are yet to occur.

Newspapers are also in the business of predicting and analyzing, but they have lots of room for detailed stories of what happened, where, when and to whom. It has been my opinion that TV news should be the shining objective eye on the world.

The fact that it has failed is a reflection on the sacrosanct news departments of the stations, which bristle at any encroachment by management on their prerogatives, and the fact that all of them try to tailor-cut the news to fit the commercials.

So it rains in Iowa

Has it ever occurred to you that you are not really interested in a weather report which covers all of the United States? Wouldn't you be satisfied to know that, in your town, the weather tomorrow will be fair or rainy, hot or cold?

You get an expanded weather report because the news department works a commercial before the weathercast and after. Fundamentally, a good newscaster is a reader, not an editor, and hardly a writer. He is worthy of his hire because his tongue glides over the semantic seas without sinking in shipshod sibilation.

It is possible for television to serve a half hour of international, national and local news, in addition to coverage of weather and sports, without editing the material to the film footage at hand. Film comes first.

If the President of the United States is at San Clemente, for example, his presence is not as important to television as the film of 40 wives of Vietnam prisoners who picket the entrance gate. The Black Panthers learned long ago that no protest is going anywhere, Man, unless you call the TV stations first and tell them where you're going to shout and raise the clenched fist.

In New York, Carl Stokes, former mayor of Cleveland, a black, and Paul Udell, a white, swap stiff pleasantries as they read the news for NBC. The little "asides" were discovered by ABC two years ago and it so enthralled the bird watchers that most TV stations insist that the anchorman josh one of his buddies about the new tie he wears or the fact that his third kid is now teething.

The coverage of news during the President's visits to China and Moscow pointed up the sorrowful truth, known to all newspaper reporters, that when a deadline falls due you must come up with something, even though no one knows what is going on. So you guess what is transpiring and attribute it to a "high source" or a "White House spokesman."

Down the years, I have disagreed with President Nixon more often than not, but I endorse his stand against "instant analysis." It is childish American that first we hear the President, then, because it is assumed that no one understands a word he uttered, we must listen to the pontificators waiting in the wings to explain everything to us morons.

That unseen monster who runs the news department in the television station must be made to chew — and swallow — his words...

Television fears the rating war so much that it underestimates its power. If it had not been for TV, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. might still be preaching in the Dexter Avenue Church in Montgomery. It can make a man bigger than he is, and smaller, too, as in the case of George Wallace and Richard Nixon.

I feel strongly that more time and better editing will free TV of the bonds of the advertiser. The world of communication is swift, and events pile up like stormy surf. We need to know more about more.

Legislature moves slow in acting on new budget

HARRISBURG (UPI)—With less than a month left before the deadline, the legislature still has not begun its debate of next year's fiscal budget.

Gov. Milton J. Shapp's $3.645 billion spending proposal has been sitting in the House and Senate Appropriations Committees since March.

The House Committee has promised to unveil its budget ideas late this week or early next week. The Senate committee is at least two or three weeks away from a decision.

And even after those proposals are presented, lengthy floor debates are sure to follow.

Despite the problems, House Appropriations Chairman Rep. Martin P. Mullen, D-Philadelphia, said the lawmakers can meet the July 1 deadline. He said the proposal his committee will present is about the same as Shapp's, except for an extra $50 million which was added to finance a new aid program for non-public schools.

"I'm using a little different strategy this year," Mullen said. "I want to give everybody who thinks they can make a substantial cut a chance to do so. If they think we ought to cut welfare or education, let them justify it."

He predicted many House members would ask for increases in the budget for "pet projects" in their home districts.

"I would say I have at least $100 million in requests for additional funding," he said. "If every department and school got what it wanted, we probably would have a $7 billion budget."

Shapp, still stinging from the budget delays during his first two summers in office, issued a plea to the lawmakers to preserve the state's "fiscal stability" by acting quickly on the budget.

In the Senate, another hearing was set up by the Appropriations Committee Thursday to hear what six mayors think about the financial needs of cities.

In addition to the budget, the House plans to spend this week debating the racial busing of school children and special financing for 200 public school districts.

One anti-busing bill already received House approval and is in the Senate. It would prohibit the busing of a child without parental consent.

Although it did not refer to racial busing, it generally was understood to be a reaction to school desegregation through forced busing.

The bill ready for a final House vote this week sets out specific procedures for the Human Relations Commission to follow when investigating discrimination in schools.

The commission, according to the bill, could not order desegregation if that order would result in the busing of children.

Rep. Charles N. Caputo, D-Allegheny, sponsored the second bill. It originally stripped the commission of its power to investigate racial discrimination in schools but was amended two weeks ago to its present form.

Caputo said he would ask the House Tuesday to return the measure to its original form and pass it that way. If the move fails, Caputo said he then would ask for a delay in any final vote.

Democratic leaders said they would try again to pass a bill giving extra money to the Philadelphia and Pittsburgh schools.

The bill was defeated several weeks ago when it only contained money for the two cities. It was amended last week so that another 200 districts would be included.

The bill now would give Philadelphia $16 million, Pittsburgh $3 million, and the other districts about $14 million.

The money would be in the form of special education funds which normally would not go to the districts until next March. The measure would require the state to pay the district by July 31.

In addition, all future special education payments would be made four times a year instead of once at the end of the school year.

Rep. Martin P. Mullen, D-

Philadelphia, said last week he had gathered enough votes to pass the measure, but at the request of the Philadelphia school district, no vote was taken.

School officials, worried that the bill might be defeated on its second and final chance, said they wanted to make sure all the House members understood the legislation.

In the Senate, a bill creating a new retirement system for district justices is scheduled for a vote.

The bill, as it passed the House, would have cost the state $2.2 million. The Senate pared that down to $1.2 million.

To qualify for a full pension, a district justice would have to serve 30 years and retire not before the age 60. It would affect about 600 members of the minor judiciary.

U.S. planes pound enemy facilities

SAIGON (UPI)—American warplanes grounded for two days by a tropical storm took advantage of clearing weather Sunday, pounding Communist troops and transportation facilities in both North and South Vietnam.

South Vietnamese troops countered a Communist attack at Phu My on the central coast and recaptured a church held by the Communists for 11 days in the Central Highlands city of Kontum.

In the sea war, UPI photographer David Kennerly reported from the cruiser Newport News that American Navy forces had spotted a merchant ship lying off the southern coast of North Vietnam, apparently unloading cargo on the beach to avoid mined Communist ports.

Officers of the cruiser refused to identify the ship by type or nationality or to say whether cargo was actually being unloaded.

The Navy took no action against the ship. The Newport News stayed several miles away from it.

Skies clearing as Tropical Storm Mame moved offshore ended a brief respite from bombing for the Communists. U.S. planes returned in force.

"It's business as usual all the way," said a spokesman at the big U.S. airbase at Da Nang, 360 miles north of Saigon. Virtually all missions from the base were cancelled Friday and Saturday because of bad weather, but 100 F4 phantoms resumed the raids.

The North Vietnamese agency VNS, in a broadcast monitored in Tokyo, said anti-aircraft crews in Ha Bac province in North Vietnam shot down a U.S. warplane Sunday.

Navy and Air Force jets were able to operate out of Thailand during the storm. The U.S. command said pilots flew 250 raids against North Vietnam Saturday, mostly in the northern part of the country where skies were clearer.

A spokesman said the warplanes started six fires at a petroleum pumping station four miles north of Haiphong, North Vietnam's major port, and bombed the Bac La railroad yard 40 miles northeast of Hanoi. Pilots also said they cut the Hanoi-China rail line in six places and destroyed or damaged 16 bridges.

Cambodia holds election

PHNOM PENH (UPI)—Cambodia held the first presidential election in its history Sunday despite heavy fighting between government troops and Communists which closed down polling places in some areas near the capital.

Two million voters were expected to cast ballots.

Early returns showed the voting almost evenly divided between incumbent President Lon Nol and his main challenger, In Tam, who promised less military control of the country. A second challenger, Law Prof. Keo An, was far behind in the early count.

At least three government soldiers were killed and 13 wounded in fighting 12 miles north and 15 miles south of the city. A government spokesman said 11 polling places in the fighting areas had to be closed.

U.S. and Cambodian air attacks failed to break the enemy ring around an infantry company surrounded by Communists 17 miles south of the capital.

Communist attacks around Phnom Penh and in the southeastern provinces appeared to be intended to prevent people from voting, a military spokesman said.

Balloting in the city proceeded without incident.

In Tam, a former leader of the national assembly, was backed by the opposition Democratic party. He has said he will win with a 70 per cent majority "if the election is run legally."

In Tam's platform included a promise to let the voters decide whether Prince Norodom Sihanouk, ousted by Lon Nol and his military supporters, should be allowed to return to Cambodia.

Israel takes precautions to prevent suicide attack

TEL AVIV (UPI)—President Nixon Sunday deplored the "ugly violence and bloodshed" of the massacre at Israel's Lod International Airport carried out by three Japanese terrorists in the employ of Arab guerrillas.

Israel took unprecedented precautions to make sure any similar attack does not mar the fifth anniversary of the 1967

Middle East War.

In a message read by U.S. Ambassador H. Waltham Barbour at a ceremony preceding the departure of the bodies of 16 Americans from Puerto Rico slain in the assault Tuesday night, Nixon expressed the American people's grief.

"The ugly violence and bloodshed inflicted upon innocent men, women and children by terrorists at Tel Aviv airport is a tragedy of profound and shocking proportions," Nixon's message said. "No political cause or ideological gain can possibly excuse the indecent murder of unarmed human beings."

In our grief, may we, and all good people of the world, find urgent cause to reaffirm our commitment to seek an end to the use of force and violence so that such deeds may be banished from the human society."

Prime Minister Eisaku Sato of Japan, in a similar message to Israeli Prime Minister Golda Meir who attended the ceremony, deplored the Lod massacre as a "dastardly act of terrorism" and said the Japanese people "are determined to do our utmost to prevent a recurrence."

The personal envoy of Japanese Prime Minister Eisaku Sato, Kenji Fukunaga, discussed the massacre with Prime Minister Golda Meir and said at a news conference later that Japan would pay a "substantial" amount of compensation to the families of the victims.

"We know the three murderers were Japanese and we apologize for it," he said.

Spending reform law endangered

WASHINGTON (UPI)—The new federal campaign spending law is in danger of being gutted by Congress which instead should be making it even stronger, a spokesman for a citizens' lobby group said Sunday.

Fred Wertheimer, coordinator of a campaign monitoring project for Common Cause, called for reinstatement of the $5,000 limitation on individual contributions as a first step to making the law more effective.

Wertheimer commented on the situation in a UPI Washington Window interview.

The law, limiting advertising expenditures and requiring detailed disclosure of a federal candidate's receipts and expenditures, has been coming under increasing attack in the House.

The House Administration Committee Tuesday is to consider revisions in disclosure provisions which Wertheimer said would amount to "a very sophisticated form of gutting the law."

The amendments being proposed by Committee Chairman Wayne L. Hays, D-Ohio, and others would replace the quarterly reports on expenses and receipts with mid-year and year-end reports. The present deadline for reports, 15 and 5 days before an election, would be replaced with one report 10 days before the election and another 30 days afterward.

"That would mean that from the period from June 30 through the election for all practical purposes, it would be impossible to get that information, analyze it and get it out to the public before the election," Wertheimer said.

Common Cause, a citizens' group with members across the country, is examining financial reports of candidates for President, Senate and House. It has been told by House Speaker Carl Albert that he wants public hearings before any changes are approved by Hays' committee.

Wertheimer said that under the new law it is possible to show "that special interest groups pay enormous sums of money to finance campaigns in this country and they get a direct return from that. They get power, access to influence. We think the new law provides the opportunity to demonstrate just how bad the present system is."

Wertheimer said Common Cause will not press this year for reinstatement of the $5,000 limit on contributions which was repealed by adoption of the new law. That move will come later, he said, adding that his group's ultimate goal is to show the public the present system of campaign financing invites corruption and must be fundamentally reformed.

Stalemate blamed on Russia

By United Press International

Premier Moammar Khadafy of Libya Sunday blamed the Soviet Union for the current stalemate in the Middle East and said the Arabs should fight Israel with stones, if necessary.

At the same time, Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban said the five years since the 1967 war should have convinced the Arabs they now have only two alternatives: continue the no-war, no-peace situation or negotiate a settlement with Israel.

Both Khadafy and Eban spoke in interviews in connection with the fifth anniversary of the June 5-10 1967 war between the Arab and Israelis.

Israel has no special celebrations scheduled to mark its military victory during the week beginning today. But the most stringent security precautions since the war were imposed at Tel Aviv's international airport against the threat of another attack by Japanese radicals working for Arab guerrillas.

International airports throughout Europe also were placed on alert.

Communist troops still fought from two pockets inside the city, located 260 miles north of Saigon, but the overall Communist attack eased enough to allow government engineers to start repairing shell holes in the Kontum airstrip.

McGovern assured of N.J. win

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI)—Sen. George McGovern is virtually assured of winning more convention delegates in Tuesday's New Jersey primary than his only major rival in the election, Sen. Humbert H. Humphrey.

Predictions of the number of delegates McGovern will win here range from 51 to 71 in a field of 109.

The New Jersey race has been waged by political organizations and not by the candidates themselves. McGovern and Humphrey, too busy pursuing California's 271 delegates, each have paid only one visit to New Jersey in the past month.

The McGovern campaign organization, however, has outspent and outthrust Humphrey's people, who have had to rely on sometimes less enthusiastic existing county Democratic organizations for much of their vote-drawing effort.

VIRAL INFECTIONS

By Dr. Thomas F. Snyder D.C.

Under certain conditions all of us at one time or another develop a Viral Infection. Why? Because our bodies did not have the necessary resistance to meet the demands of these conditions. Because of nerve interference to normal body functions, many people have low resistance. Therefore the invasion force of the Virus demands more of the body than it can perform and the symptoms develop. Today's virus may last from one day to one month and often depleting the body's resources for months afterwards.

Chiropractic often binds the point of nerve interference that is depriving the body of its normal resistance and permits it to become sound again. (One of a series of articles published in the public interest to explain and illustrate the scientific practice of Chiropractic, written by Dr. Thomas F. Snyder, Chiropractic Orthopedist, Broadheadville, Pa. 18322. Ph. 992-4787.)

The Slim Gourmet

Busy day desserts

By BARBARA GIBBONS

Are you ready for this? "X"-rated desserts — featuring un-forgotten fruits! "X" for extra low-calorie, yet so sinfully spirited they seem worse than fattening!

Too often fresh fruit ends up buried in sugar and piled on one of those ubiquitous packaged powder-puff sponge cakes devoid of any flavor but licksweet.

("Licksweet" is a uniquely American flavor developed by the baking industry, apparently to satisfy a vast market of four-year-olds kicking in supermarket baskets.)

You don't have to resort to sponge cake and fruit for a speedy dessert. In France the homemaker-in-a-hurry has her own uniquely French manner for making a busy-day dessert.

Peaches Aux Vin Rouge
Instead of slicing fresh peaches onto a sponge cake, as we might, she slices them into a shallow bowl of chilled red wine, just before dinner. By dessert time the slices have achieved just the right degree of "spirited" chill. Allow one large peach per person, and serve your Peaches in Red Wine in stemmed glasses. The calories will be about 70 a serving. (On those days when skinning a peach seems unreasonably laborious use well-drained diet-pack or juice-packed peach halves.)

Slim Gourmet "Blushing Pears"
2 cups canned pear halves (low-calorie or juice-packed)
½ cup dry red wine
½ cup orange juice
Pinch of powdered clove
Pinch of cinnamon
Pinch of grated lemon or orange rind
3 tablespoons sugar
Drain the fruit and reserve the juice. Arrange the pears in a pretty crystal bowl, or in four individual stemmed glasses.

Measure out one-half of the reserved juice from the can and pour it into a saucepan. Add all remaining ingredients and bring to a boil. Simmer, covered for 10 minutes. Allow to cool enough so you don't shatter your serving dish, then pour the warm wine mixture over the pears. Chill thoroughly before serving; serves four, 95 calories per serving.

SUGARLESS VERSION — substitute one teaspoon cornstarch for the sugar. After wine has simmered, stir in the sweetener to equal three tablespoons of sugar (nine quarter-grain tablets. For other types, check label). Sixty-two calories per serving.

Slim Strawberries Romanoff

At Maxim's in Paris this is served smothered in heavy whipped cream, with a half eggshell of cognac in the middle. It's ignited and carried to the table in a blaze of glory. The alcohol calories go up in flames but not the whipped cream, so try it this way:

2 cups fresh strawberries
½ cup orange juice
3 tablespoons sugar (or equivalent in sugar substitute)
4 tablespoons orange liqueur
½ cup prepared low-calorie whipped topping (or aerosol topping)

Wash and hull the strawberries and put them in a decorative glass serving dish. Stir with juice, sweetener and liqueur. Chill for one hour or more. At dessert time spoon strawberries into footed champagne glasses and top with two tablespoons of whipped topping per person. Serves four, 139 calories each. (With sugar substitute, 104 calories per serving.)

(Be an entertaining hostess with "decalorized" dips, (including a make-your-own "sour cream" with only half the calories. Send a stamped, self-addressed envelope and 25 cents to SLIM GOURMET PARTY DIPS, in care of this newspaper, 50 West Shore Trail, Sparta, N.J. 07871.)

Just Between Us—

By Bobby Westbrook

I think I know one kindergartner who won't be tempted to shoplift as a teenager. A couple of weeks ago, I thought to brighten my new stone wall and passersby with a bright red geranium at the top of my steps.

It lasted one day and then vanished, pot and all, which was disheartening in view of my abiding if sometimes sorely tried faith in my fellow man.

About ten days later, a woman in a slowly cruising car hailed me as I came down the steps to ask if I was missing a potted plant. When I said yes, she hauled out my missing geranium and explained that her daughter, sitting subdued and obviously shaken beside her, had been collecting potted plants on her way to school and taking them to her teacher.

"Now all I have to do is help her find out where she got the other two," she said in exasperation. But she needn't have done it at all and I'll bet after such prompt and personal retribution even the dandelions will be safe from that particular child.

I can remember in sharp and still-horrified detail a somewhat similar incident from my childhood. When we turned up with a brand new doll one day, a court of inquiry revealed that we had bought it with money we'd taken from that font from which all blessing flow "Mommy's pocketbook."

In this case, the doll wasn't

Harris poll shows trend

McGovern image on rise

By LOUIS HARRIS

As Sen. George McGovern has become more visible to the American electorate, with the number of voters expressing familiarity with him nationwide rising from 55 to 70 per cent in the past two months, the public impression of him has firmed up to a highly positive profile.

As yet, however, the intensity of this support has not risen to peak levels. By contrast, Sen. Hubert Humphrey, well known to 82 per cent when the primaries began, strikes most voters in a mixed way — well respected and well liked, but with political handicaps perceived by close to half the electorate. At the same time, those who respond to the Humphrey warmth do so with considerable conviction.

A national cross section of 1,385 likely voters was recently asked this series of questions about McGovern:

"I'd like to read you some statements some people have made about Senator George McGovern of South Dakota. For each, tell me if you tend to agree or disagree."

x — Not asked

Across the board, on all dimensions, McGovern has improved his personal standing with the voters. The growth in the appeal of the McGovern personality is particularly striking. In early April, voters were evenly divided, 27-26 per cent, over whether he has a "sincere, appealing personality", with four out of 10 Americans unable to express an opinion on this score. In this May Harris Survey, 26 per cent are still negative but 19 per cent more have reached a judgment about his personality — and all come down on the positive side.

McGovern also shows some signs of communicating a sense of "wanting to help the working man," which is important to his success with the blue-collar vote.

His problems appear to be two-fold: 1) He has yet to convince more than 36 per cent of the voters nationwide that he "inspires confidence as a President should," and 2) The public has not yet made up its mind on the charge that he is "too extreme, a liberal." Basically, the test on George McGovern is how his credibility holds up as he moves up from an outside challenger to a front-runner.

Because he has been a nationally known figure for many years, Senator Humphrey's profile has been subject to far less change. The cross section of voters was asked:

"I'd like to read you some statements some people have made about Senator Hubert Humphrey. For each, tell me if you tend to agree or disagree."

Those who view the former Vice President as a warm and friendly man include three out of every four Americans. Although he is well liked, Hubert Humphrey has nearly as many negatives going against him as positive attributes working for him. Above all else, he is a fully known quantity to the American electorate.

George McGovern, on the other hand, comes across as a late discovery, which gives him momentum. But the newness of these impressions also make him more subject to changing public appraisal — one that can move up or down, depending on his day-to-day performance.

S. Dakota GOP Sen. reign ends

PIERRE, S.D. (UPI)—South Dakota Republicans, who waited 2½ years on hopes that Sen. Karl Mundt would regain his health and return to the Senate, Tuesday will officially end his 24-year hold on the seat.

Mundt, 72, who has been absent from the Senate floor since suffering an incapacitating stroke in December, 1969, is missing from the June 6 primary ballot. It is the first time since he was elected to the House in 1938 that Mundt has not stood for election.

Five Republicans seek nomination to the Senate seat. Two candidates are contending the Democratic senatorial nomination, including the favored Rep. James Abourezk, a freshman congressman from Rapid City. President Nixon and South Dakota's own Sen. George S. McGovern have delegate states unopposed in the presidential primaries. Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama toyed with the idea of entering the primary but did not file a slate of delegates.

McGovern will pick up 17 committed delegates from South Dakota to the Democratic National Convention and Nixon will have 14 delegates to the GOP convention.

Despite South Dakota's winner-take-all presidential primary, the crowded Senate Republican primary has sparked the most interest around the state.

State GOP leaders have expressed both apprehension and elation over the large number of candidates in the Senate primary.

"The apprehension was based upon the possibility of severe infighting that might cause wounds that would be hard to heal," GOP State Chairman Robert Burns said.

Many Republicans doubt any of the five candidates has enough statewide strength to capture 35 per cent of the vote at the polls. If not, the two top vote-getters Tuesday would battle for the nomination at the party's state convention.

N. J. primary promises red hot delegate scramble

TRENTON, N.J. (UPI) — The New Jersey primary on Tuesday will be a scramble between presidential contenders Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey and Sen. George McGovern to capture a majority of the state's 109 delegates to the Democratic National Convention.

Unlike Tuesday's election in California, where the entire block of 271 delegates goes to the candidate with a majority of the popular vote, New Jersey is not a popular election state. Voters choose delegates who by state law are not legally bound to support a candidate but who are identified on the ballot with one of the presidential hopefuls or else uncommitted.

Both Humphrey and McGovern camps say 55 delegates will be a victory.

McGovern has 102 delegates entered in county-by-county balloting, plus seven on an at-large statewide slate. Humphrey's at-large slate is led by Salvatore A. Bontempo, the state party chairman. Humphrey has 70 other delegates entered in the 21 counties, plus other delegate supporters who are nominally uncommitted.

Several delegates supporting Sen. Edmund S. Muskie, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, Gov. George C. Wallace and Congresswoman Shirley Chisholm of New York are also on some county ballots.

New Jersey, although overshadowed in recent weeks by the hotly contested California race, is crucial because the 109-member delegation is the nation's eighth largest voting block.

Still, McGovern spent just one day campaigning here, holding two news conferences and attending several rallies. But he has received a late push from his New York state organization, which last week began a series of television spot commercials beamed into New Jersey. Humphrey's organizations say they cannot afford to buy broadcast time.

Humphrey, who was in the state on two occasions, cancelled an appearance at a $25 fund raising party.

In terms of money and manpower McGovern has the edge. His state organization planned to spend $100,000 on a voter turnout drive through 70 campaign headquarters. Humphrey's campaigners, relying on the organizational power of several county bosses and the labor movement, said they would spend less than $50,000.

Republican voters will choose 40 delegates, including 10 at-large, who will be technically uncommitted though supporters of President Nixon.

In other races, three-term Republican Sen. Clifford P. Case has only nominal opposition from James W. Ralph of Demarest, a Vietnam veteran flight surgeon and war hawk. Former Congressman Paul J. Krebs of Livingston and publisher Daniel M. Gaby of Somerville are leading the field of four contenders for the Democratic nomination.

A key congressional race pits incumbent Democrats Dominick V. Daiele and Cornelius E. Gallagher against each other in Hudson County, where Gallagher is under federal indictment for income tax evasion.

Eleven-term Congressman Peter W. Rodino Jr., ranking Democrat on the House Judiciary Committee faces a tough battle against two blacks, Mayor William S. Harf of East Orange and state Assemblyman George C. Richardson of Newark in a newly drawn district that is evenly split along racial lines.

A federal court on May 26 ordered election boards to allow crossover voting, ruling that a state law requiring a voter to sit out primary elections for 36 months before switching parties was unconstitutional. Crossovers of Republican Italian-Americans in Newark may help Rodino, but the court's decision is expected to have a minimal impact on other races.

1972 won't be consumer's year

HARRISBURG (UPI)— Sorry folks, 1972 is not shaping up to be the "year of the consumer" in Pennsylvania.

There has been a lot of talk. A lot of speeches. A lot of news stories. But nothing has been accomplished.

Gov. Milton J. Shapp, who started talking about consumerism when he was elected, made some definite promises last January. His priority items were no-fault auto insurance, a law abolishing milk price fixing and a so-called "citizens advocate" to fight for the consumer.

Where are they now?

The milk bill still has not been introduced in the legislature. Everytime the administration is asked why, the answer is: "Wait until next week...give us one more week."

The bill has been rewritten several times to please the farmers, who still do not like it.

The no-fault bill has been "compromised." But the compromise did not sway the only group that ever really opposed no-fault—the trial lawyers.

And the "citizens advocate" probably will be the first thing the legislature cuts from Shapp's 1972-73 budget. Many lawmakers think it is unnecessary.

Shapp supplemented these "priority" items last January with a list of 20 other consumer bills covering everything from time payments to trading stamps.

Four bills unwritten

Four months later, five of those bills have not even been written. Only two have been reported out of committee and only one has been voted upon.

Ralph Tive, Shapp's legislative aide, says he now is ready to "light a fire" under the committees where these bills are sitting.

The legislature will adjourn at the end of July for political conventions. Most of July will be occupied by bickering over the budget and other emotional odds and ends—like busing and welfare.

Then, the legislature plans to come back for another five weeks in September and October. That will be the time for campaign speeches, special interest bills and other schemes to get re-elected Nov. 4.

After that, it is anybody's guess. But if nothing is done by December, when the 1971-72 session ends, all of these bills will die.

Tive says there is still a good chance for these bills, despite the election year problems.

How much are you willing to lose on a $2,000 car?

1969 Volkswagen 113

The real price of a car is the difference between what you pay for it new, and what you sell it for old. So in 3 short years, you could have lost almost 1/2 of your original investment. Or saved almost 3/4 of it.

Losses shown reflect the average depreciation of these 1969 economy cars by comparing what they sold for new with the average resale prices they were sold for by used car dealers in Jan. 1972 as quoted in NADA Official Used Car Guide, Eastern Edition, Jan., 1972. ©Volkswagen of America, Inc.

Write to know

The people in The Pocono Record circulation area have a "Write to Know" — and The Record will try to provide the answers in the "Write to Know" column. The column, designed to answer any questions or solve any problems (consumer, government or anything else) will appear every Monday on the first page of the second section. Send all questions to "Write to Know," The Pocono Record, 511 Lenox St., Stroudsburg, Pa. 18360. Questions should be in writing and signed. No telephone calls, please.

Q. — Recently when trying to replace a little girl's doll which burned when her parents' trailer caught fire, we bought her a new one and had several good dolls turned over to us which could be made to look like new if we could get a few spare parts. Do you know of a company or an individual who repairs dolls? If we can get them repaired we could dress them and make other little girls happy.

W.J., Long Pond

A. — The Pocono Doll Hospital in Poplar Valley (992-6304) repairs dolls. You might also try Mrs. Santa's Doll Shop in Mountainhome (595-7331). We also contacted Mrs. Joan Lesoine of Henryville (629-1384) who had repaired 50 dolls for distribution to needy youngsters at Christmas. She has graciously offered her services free of charge, providing the dolls will be given to needy children.

Q. — I would like to know if there is a local or countywide hairdressers' association and, if there is, what are the names and addresses of its officers.

A.F., Stroudsburg

A. — There aren't any local organizations of that nature, however, there is a statewide organization called the Pennsylvania Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association. The closest local chapter is in the Allentown area but you may be interested in becoming a "Member at Large." The president of the organization is Owen Mitchell, Jr., and his address is 120 North Beaver St., York, Penna. 17400.

Q. — What about people that have dogs running loose that attack people as they walk on the roads when they are being led by their own dog on a leash. This happened to me. I am almost blind and have a dog to help me get along. My doctor has advised me to go out for a walk every day. Does the law about dogs being loose apply only in the city.

W. A. Stroudsburg

A. — According to Pete Citsey, dog enforcement officer for Monroe and Carbon Counties, Section 702 of the Dog Laws of 1965 covers all areas of the state — city and rural — and provides for fines ranging from $10 to $300 for owners of dogs running at large. Citsey recommended you contact the Stroudsburg Borough Police next time this occurs. If you wish further information, you may contact him directly at 646-2152.

Q. — My husband recently built a wall shelf and cabinet unit in our recreation room into which he set our portable television. Now I am told by a friend that the placement of the TV could be a fire hazard. Why is this so?

C.G., Blakeslee

A. — TV cabinets are purposely designed to allow for adequate ventilation. For this reason, you should not recess your TV set in a wall or homemade cabinet unless adequate ventilation is available, or you might be creating a potential fire hazard.

FBI hunt youth for ranger attack

By SKIP TAGGART
Pocono Record Reporter

SHAWNEE-ON-DELAWARE — A 19-year-old New Jersey squatter was the object of an FBI manhunt in the Shawnee-on-Delaware area Saturday morning after he allegedly assaulted a federal officer on government property Friday night.

The youth, who is still at large, was identified as James Baldwin of Watchung, N.J. He reportedly struck National Park Service Ranger Andrew Hutchison in the face with the butt of a shotgun and then pointed the weapon at the fallen ranger. Another squatter felled the would-be gunman before any shots could be fired.

On Saturday morning, 12 FBI agents from the Philadelphia and Scranton offices combed the area questioning other squatters and area residents and searched for the assailant. Although he could not be located, a state warrant was issued for his arrest.

He is being sought by Pennsylvania State Police for aggravated assault and battery.

Three fined for drinking

SCOTRUN — Pocono Township Police arrested three area youths recently and charged the trio with under-age consumption of alcoholic beverages.

Randall Kresge, 18, of Scotrun; Robert L. Mitchell II, 20, of Stroudsburg R.D. 2; and Richard Caruso, 18, of Gouldsboro R.D. 1, were arraigned before District Magistrate Graden Praetorius and found guilty of the charges. All were fined $25 plus $11 costs and released.

and federal charges for assaulting a federal officer will be filed today in the U.S. District Court at Scranton by the FBI.

The attack on the ranger came after a fire was reported in the "old Yeller development" area of the Tocks Island project property Friday night. The Bushkill Volunteer Fire Department was engaged in controlling a demolition fire below Bushkill and sent two trucks to the burning cabin on the Yeller tract.

Hutchison arrives — When the firefighters arrived, they radioed back saying there were two persons at the scene of the fire they thought should be questioned. Hutchison left his supervisory post at the Bushkill fire and spoke to the two men who he described as "apparently high or intoxicated on something." Hutchison attempted to detain the two until state police arrived but one left, saying he was going home to bed. A short time later he returned with "four or five more" squatters, according to the ranger. One of them, allegedly Baldwin, was wielding a shotgun.

It was during the confrontation with the group that Hutchison was struck with the gun. Baldwin was then reported to have stepped back a few yards and down the weapon to his shoulder while the ranger was still on the ground.

At this point the man who had left earlier and then returned with the others said, "No. No, don't kill him," Hutchison said, and knocked Baldwin to the ground. The group then left the scene.

Hutchison was treated for facial abrasions and reported Sunday that he was still "a little dizzy but I think I'll make it." He noted the origin of the fire that brought about the incident was not yet under investigation.

Sewerage plant standstill causes halt to construction

By ANDREA B. STERN
Pocono Record Reporter

MOUNT POCONO — There is an undeclared moratorium on commercial and industrial construction in this attractive mountaintop borough.

Large businesses — including a 120-unit Holiday Inn that would have long since been in operation — are shying away from locating here pending completion of Mount Pocono's $2.3 million sewerage system.

Until that time, these businesses would be forced to install their own sewerage systems in accordance with state requirements — a factor that would make total construction costs prohibitive.

But Mayor Gerald Possinger believes the borough's liquid waste disposal picture "looks a whole lot more promising now than it has in quite a while."

With a $380,000 grant already awarded toward the plant's construction, Mount Pocono is currently negotiating a $2 million 40-year Farmers Home Administration loan for the facility's distribution system.

"As far as our permit to construct, we have it and it has been approved by the Department of Environmental Resources and the Delaware River Basin Commission," Possinger said recently.

Dependant on funds

"So we are in order. All we have to do is get our funds worked out. And, I would say it looks very good for the next year to get the remainder of the funding, either in grants or a loan, and to get started because our sewerage problem is like all the others in the county. It is a sad situation and this is the only way we will correct it."

An approximate site for the treatment plant has been set for Route 611 south of the borough on the Forrest Hills Stream — according to Possinger, the only location available to handle the treated discharge.

Expected to begin functioning with 600 to 700 hook-ups, the plant would service the borough's current population of 1,000 residents with the ability to expand as needed to accommodate up to three times that amount.

Possinger estimated the plant's construction will take approximately one year and said that, while no bids have yet been received, "everything is in order to let out bids as soon as we get the finances straightened out and we know we can proceed."

Fees to repay loan

He noted the five per cent interest on the loan will be paid off the with system's users' fees and added the plant will be operated by the borough's newly appointed sewer authority. Official approval of the five all-volunteer members is expected at the borough council meeting scheduled for this evening.

Asked how the revenue from the system will be used once the 40-year loan is paid off, Possinger contended, "It's too far out to say because, probably by that time, you'd need a plant three times the size so you'll bury yourself again."

While home construction is continuing in Mount Pocono and sewer permits are being issued for septic tanks, these homes will be converted over to the new sewerage system once it is completed, according to Possinger.

"We have no other way to base the cost for the thing," he explained.

Meanwhile, until Mount Pocono's sewerage facility is completed and functioning, the current situation is posing its problems. The mayor disclosed at least one large business firm "has paid for a truck to come in daily and haul out the sewage because the ground just won't take it."

Has this caused many large commercial interests to reconsider locating in the borough? "Well, they really just stay away," he answered.

Five vehicles collide on I-80 in downpour

SCOTRUN — A late afternoon downpour from a passing spring thundershower was partially responsible for a five car pile-up on Interstate Route 80 at Scotrun Sunday that resulted in approximately $2,680 in damages to all the vehicles involved. There were no serious injuries.

The five-car accident was preceded by a one-car mishap involving a Seacliff, N.Y., man who lost control of his car near the Scotrun on-ramp of I-80 east, spun several times on the roadway and ran into a ditch.

The driver, Peter Madri, was uninjured.

The five-car accident occurred when Dennis Nagy, of Hackettstown, N.J., came upon the scene of Madri's accident and began to slow down. The car behind him, operated by Richard Reinmiller of Hatboro, collided with the rear of Nagy's car and set up a chain reaction pile-up involving three other cars.

Minor injuries were reported but a Pennsylvania State

Police spokesman from the Mount Pocono Barracks reported all the injured said they would consult their own physicians.

A tractor-trailer later jackknifed on the slick highway while attempting to slow down at the scene of the accident but information about the driver and the amount of damage to the rig was still unavailable late Sunday night.

Truck flips, spills oil

HAZLETON (UPI) — A tractor-trailer overturned at a rest area along Interstate 80 Friday, causing 5,500 gallons of asphalt oil to spill out onto the highway and some woodlands.

State Police said Edward A. Kerwin, of Lumberville, Pa., had pulled onto the berm of a westbound rest stop and was attempting to get back onto the highway when his rig sank into the soft shoulder.

Phillies' downfall continues in defeat

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — Johnny Bench doubled home two runs in the first inning Sunday and Jack Billingham, Tom Hall and Clay Carroll combined for an eight-hit shutout as the Cincinnati Reds defeated the slumping Philadelphia Phillies, 2-0.

The victory was the seventh straight for the Reds while the Phillies suffered their eighth consecutive loss and 18th defeat in last 19 games.

Billy Champion gave up three straight hits to start the game and was tagged with his third loss in six decisions. Pete Rose and Bobby Tolan both singled and came around on Bench's double to right-center. Bench was picked off second and Champion blanked the Reds on three hits until leaving for a pinchhitter in the eighth.

Billingham scattered four hits over 7-2-3 innings to pick up his third victory against six defeats. Hall came on in the eighth after singles by Larry Bowa and Denny Doyle, and, after giving up a single, to pinch-hitter Pete Koegel, fanned Willie Montanez.

Allen home run in ninth gives Sox sweep of Yanks

CHICAGO (UPI)—Pinch-hitter Richie Allen, who was supposed to sit out the second game for a rest, stroked a three-run homer with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning Sunday off ace reliever Sparky Lyle to give Chicago a 5-4 win over New York after the Sox had grabbed the opener behind Tom Bradley, 6-1.

A crowd of 51,904—largest Sox home crowd since July 27, 1964—saw Yankee starter Mike Kekich replaced after walking Bill Melton and giving up a single to Mike Andrews. Lyle, appearing in his 16th contest, worked the count to 1-1 before Allen slammed his ninth homer of the year into the left field seats.

In the first contest, the Yankees moved in front 1-0 when Ron Blomberg lined his third homer of the year into the right field stands.

Bosox gain split in 2nd game win

KANSAS CITY (UPI)—Rick Miller scored two runs and drove in another with a sacrifice fly Sunday, allowing the Boston Red Sox to score a 4-0 victory and split a double header with the Kansas City Royals behind the seven-hit pitching of John Curtis.

Paul Schaal's first grand slam home run in nine major league seasons paced the Royals to a 7-5 victory in the first game.

The Royals' loss in the second game broke a four-game winning streak.

In the opener, the Royals scored five runs in the sixth inning to overcome a 4-1 deficit. Gail Hopkins drove in the first run with a single, and, after Armos Otis walked to load the bases, Schaal slammed Ray Culp's first pitch over the left field fence.

Opening lead—king of hearts.

This dramatic hand was played many years ago by Bruno Grunewald of Belgium. He ruffed the heart lead and returned a club, winning West's king with the ace. After cashing the ace of diamonds, he ruffed another heart, thus reducing his trump holding to the K-Q-J. There were still four trumps missing at this point.

Grunewald was now faced with a difficult problem to solve. He had to decide whether the trumps were originally divided 3-3 or 4-2.

If they were divided 3-3, he could make the slam very easily by drawing two more rounds of trumps, cashing the Q-J of clubs, and ruffing a heart to permit him to cash the 10-6 of clubs.

But if the trumps were divided 4-2 and he now cashed the K-Q-J to draw them, discarding hearts from dummy, he would be unable to ever cash the 10-6 of clubs.

After considering the matter carefully, Grunewald concluded that in a hand so freakish the diamonds were much more likely to be divided 4-2 than 3-3 and that desperate measures were therefore required. Accordingly, he cashed the king of trumps, discarding a heart from dummy, and then cashed the Q-J of trumps, discarding the A-K of spades from dummy!

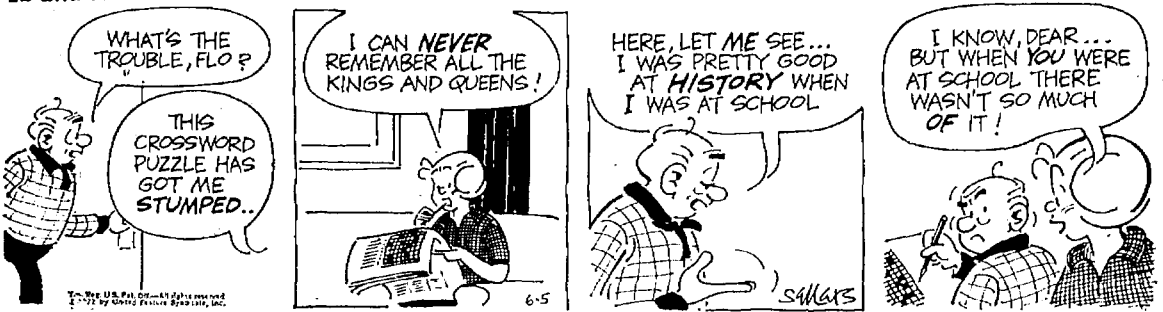

As a result, Grunewald made the slam. After cashing dummy's Q-J of clubs he led the six of spades towards his J-5.

East took the queen, but with only spades left, he had to return one to the jack. So Grunewald finished with twelve tricks consisting of six diamonds, five clubs and a spade.

Had Grunewald failed to discard the A-K of spades from dummy at the point when he did, he would inevitably have wound up going down one!

Warsaw pact nations avoid balance talks

BUCHAREST (UPI) — Warsaw pact countries have shied off early talks with the West about mutual balanced troop cuts on both sides of the dividing line in Central Europe. They express continued interest in principle following Soviet party chief Leonid Brezhnev's backing last year for mutual troop reductions in Europe. But recent plans to present a bloc proposal to the East on how such cuts should be realized have been shelved, according to authoritative diplomatic sources.

The Warsaw alignment so far has not worked out a detailed joint position on troop cuts, it is said here. Like the West, the bloc has found it to be a far more complicated problem than first thought. Also, there are differences among the bloc countries on how this problem should be tackled, just as there are in the Western alliance. The Russians themselves have maintained studied silence on the issue, except for reaffirming their interest in principle.

The Poles, preoccupied with grave domestic economic problems and strongly dependent on Russian support for their immediate development plans, are shying away from the troop cut issue, waiting evidently for Moscow to lay down the line. Hungary holds the troop cut problem should not be rushed. The Warsaw bloc countries, headed by Russia have insisted all along that it should await the projected European Security. The Hungarian view, evidently reflecting recent Warsaw Pact deliberations, is the talks should be held in a wide forum, not merely limited to NATO and Warsaw Pact members but allowing all interested parties in Europe to participate. Romania which follows a policy independent from Russia, also has reservations. A member of the Warsaw Pact, it nevertheless has been jealously guarding its independent posture even within the military alignment and its commitments. Romania holds this is not just a matter for the super powers to determine and any settlement must not be reached at the expense of other countries—meaning the smaller member countries like Romania. Authorities in Bucharest said pointedly the smaller countries will have to decide whether proposed troop cuts in Central Europe meet their interests or impair them. Therefore, the smaller countries, they insist, should have a full say in this matter. As a result the Communist is taking a new wait-and-see position.

Big shot

By Jean Adams

SPECIAL: (Q.) I had gone with some nice girls before. But the last one I went with was really special. We went together for 10½ months.

But toward the end of it I did something very stupid. I began telling lies — just to make me look like a big shot. She found out about some of the lies and broke up.

I have told people I couldn't care less, but that's a lie too.

I have written her two letters saying I was sorry and if she would give me a chance I would do anything to get her back. That's the truth. She didn't answer. What else can I do?

Out in the Cold
in Florida

(A.) You have written her. There is another way. You could call her on the telephone. But I believe this is a situation in which she needs to see your face.

Talk to her face to face. Tell her what you told her in the letters to her and what you have told me. She can see in your face whether or not you mean what you say.

SHORT: (Q.) I'm only five feet tall. Girls think I'm a runt. They like tall boys. I need help. The only girls who will look at me are short ones.

Seventh Grader
in South Carolina

(A.) What's the matter with short girls? Nothing! But you can interest taller girls too if you stress your good points—personality, smile, dancing ability, attractive hair, well-coordinated clothes, good talk, for example.

You may have a spurt of growth later and forget about your five-foot worry. The hints I've given you will serve you well then too, even if you get to be a six-footer.

BLACK LIGHT: (Comment) You had a letter from a young person who is tinkering with black light.

I have a degree in geology, and have had graduate study in it. We use ultra-violet light in certain phases of the study of minerals.

Now when I first encountered it, it hurt my eyes. Blondes often have eyes that can let in lots of U.V. and it can hurt.

I urge the boy to ask at a nearby university in its geology department — about the use of ultra-violet light and the precautions to be taken in using it.

I personally do not approve of general use of U.V. regardless of the instrument which emits it. It must be handled carefully.

Concerned in Connecticut

(A.) Thank you for your letter. It may be helpful to many boys and girls who read this column.

THE SHAG: (Q.) I have long hair and am going to get it cut. What I want to know is if the shag is going to stay in style. My friends tell me I would look great in a shag. Ready For a Change in Texas

(A.) The shag has been around a long time and it is on its way out. In some places it's already gone.

Girls are also tiring of long straight hair. Many are adopting shorter, curlier styles.

The gypsy, top-of-shoulder length, is one popular change. Another is a very short curly cut.

Most girls need a permanent for either of these.

BIG TEETH: (Q.) Almost everybody says I'm ugly. I think the reason is that I have two, big, front teeth. My brothers call me names like "Bucky Beaver."

But the teeth aren't buck teeth. They don't stick out. They're just big.

I'm in the sixth grade now. One of my neighbors said to me on the bus: "I pity you when you get into high school. You're so ugly they will throw you out the first day." Please help me.

Ugly in Utah

(A.) Your neighbor on the bus has more problems than you do. Someone should tell her to mind her mouth. But don't do it yourself.

Your teeth need not be a permanent problem. First, you will probably "grow up" to them and your mouth will probably look quite normal with nothing but standard care. But to be sure, talk to your dentist. If any corrective work is needed he will tell you.

No refuge

It is not too early for mothers everywhere to begin the search for a good summer camp.

There are camps for children geared toward tennis, basketball, baseball and football. There are camps for fat kids, maladjusted kids, hungry-for-nature kids and militaristic kids.

I am looking for a camp where there are no organized activities, the food is fattening and there are no kids!

I am speaking of course of a Camp for Tired Mothers. I visualize it as a little cottage in a clearing where there are no rainy days, no ironing board in the middle of the living room and eight sets of car keys on a large nail by the front door.

I don't ask for much in this world. I never have. I'd just like a few weeks where I could sleep in a bed where the alarm clock is on the opposite side.

Where I could go to the bathroom, lock the door and know that when I looked through the keyhole I will not encounter another eye.

I want the phone to ring and have it be for me.

I want to walk into a room and see all the drawers closed.

I want to drink a cup of coffee while it's hot.

Sometimes when I hallucinate, I wonder what it would be like to walk across a kitchen floor and not have your shoe stick to it.

Or to sit by and watch someone else replace the toilet tissue spindle.

Or to comb my hair before noon.

Or to leave a roll of adhesive tape on a table for five minutes and return and still have it there.

Sometimes I get to thinking how great it would be to pick up my toothbrush and have it be dry.

Or to drive a car and not have to worry about sudden stops.

Or cut up my meat and eat it without blowing on it and sharing.

Wouldn't it be wild to have a recording of a child whining and saying, "There's nothing to do" and being able to say, "So why don't you run away from home like all the other kids."

But mostly wouldn't it be wonderful to be able to read and not be so exhausted that you fall asleep over Burt Reynolds.

Who am I kidding? There aren't any camps for mothers. I am stuck with another summer in Never-Never Land with three kids and my husband, Peter Pan. All those who believe in varicose veins of the neck . . . clap your hands!

Voice of Broadway

NEW YORK — Ralph Bellamy's last double hernia operation was just rehearsal: he's just had it doubled all over again. . . . Dorothy Rodgers, wife of "Oklahoma!" etc. composer Richard, is in Lenox Hill Hospital; cardiac attack. . . . We're finally convinced after his last glut of flicks, Richard Burton isn't an actor. He's a voice. . . . We were certain "That Championship Season" (by Jason Miller) would win the New York Drama Critics Circle best-play award, and finally we were right. The announced prize went to "Sticks & Bones" — until belatedly the critics' squares discovered they'd added the votes incorrectly (someone forgot to "carry one") so now we're right. Both authors are even madder at the New York critics than usual. . . . Prettiest TV themes: the scintillating exit music at the Cavettcast's finale; the lovely, tinkly repetitive, anti-monotony of the jingly melody starting off the weekly, Dick Van Dykecast; Mary Tyler Moore Show's blithe, carbonated opening tune full of brightness. . . . Let's also nominate Mary Tyler Moore as the best dressed girl on TV; she wears everything precisely, tastefully, brightly right; none of the fussy, quasi-formality of late-talkshow pseudo-elegance. Her duds have the kicky, swingy attractiveness that underlines the masterful taste of this best-comedy-on-TV.

Mary Rodgers (composer Dick's gifted sprig) told us she's delighted with what TV's done with her "Once Upon a Mattress" special (Mary composed the score) starring Carol Burnett. This is the New York musical which years ago brought Carol to the attention of critics here as more than just another funny face. . . . The naked truth about backstage brawls at "Oh! Calcutta!" is that two rude, nude performers were dressed down and bounced and two others quit. It's nearing its fourth disgusting year. . . . Its producer Hilly Elkins' next assault on Fort Knox will be the "Money Tight" movie expected to star George Oscar Scott.

Georgie Jessel's spring rug-cleaning: his seasonal toupee shift now has him affecting snow-white ear-to-ear carpeting with gray lowlights. . . . Zsa Zsa & Mama at Casino Russe dug basketball Walt Frazier's suede buckskin boots and demanded, doll-like, where he'd bought them. . . . Janet Leigh spent a day and a half in Fun City to plug her "One is a Lonely Number" film, five of the hours at Caruso's hairdo salon. . . . J. Susann (Valley of the Dolls, the Porno Machine) has her next plot all filled up. We hear it's about a young girl who falls madly in love with her father. . . . On the premise, we suppose, that "Electra" is a simple story of father love.

Ernest Borgnine (just another pretty face) has another new flame: Tove Newman. . . . Her ex mate, Gunther Sachs, is building a $500,000 home at St. Tropez, so Brigitte Bardot's moving to Ibiza, where on a clear day you no longer can see Clifford Irving.

Most open-fisted Diamond Jim Brady of this generation is rich-rich John Mulcahy. Couple times a year, he charts a plane and takes 100 or more friends to his place in Ireland. This year the usual Mulcahy-chartered 707 jet wasn't big enough, so he leased a 747. One morning he had 100 invited; late the same day it was 153. This one, folks he'd met through the day. He filled it by takeoff time. Friends invited from L.A., Detroit etc. were sent free plane tickets from their far-from-New York starting points. And if they wish to stop over in Erie or go on to the European continent, tickets home via commercial airlines are made available. Makes Diamond Jim Brady seem more like a Zircon. No, we don't know him, worse luck.

"Say, how long have you two been in love?"

Ann Landers

Neighborly

Dear Ann Landers: As a practicing radiologist I take exception to your statement (which is also the position of some physicians) that proper support for the breasts (a good brassiere) will minimize sagging.

During the past 40 years most American women (starting at about age 13) have worn brassieres almost the entire time they are in an upright position. Some women even sleep in brassieres. This practice stems from the belief that the female figure is more attractive if the bosom is elevated, pointed outward, separated, and so on.

It boils down to a matter of appearance rather than health. I personally prefer the natural, unsupported look to the elevated, fixed look that resembles and feels like a department store mannequin.

Physicians know that body tissue tends to atrophy and lose strength when supported and immobilized. It may be that the immobilization of the breasts and the pressure from a brassiere can reduce blood supply, tend to cause atrophy, and create more than ordinary sagging. Scientific evidence actually favors no bra.

To learn definitely whether brassieres reduce or increase sagging would require controlled studies. One would need to get volunteers who would be willing to wear a bra on one breast only for a period of several years. Any suggestions?

Texas M.D.

Dear M.D.: Sincere and dedicated people have done many things in the interest of scientific research but I suspect you'd have a tough time recruiting volunteers for THIS project. If you succeed, please let me know.

Dear Ann: My husband and I live in a nice apartment. A newlywed couple moved in across the hall. I invited the young woman in for coffee the second morning. She has been here every day since, for at least three hours.

Now it has gotten to the point where she expects me to be her marriage counselor. Whenever she and her husband have a fight she wants me to tell her what to do. I am sick of it.

I have tried everything from removing the welcome mat outside our door to buying a plaque for the kitchen which reads, "Love your neighbor but don't wear out your welcome." She doesn't get the idea.

Don't suggest that I come right out and tell her to cool it. She's a nice person and I don't want to hurt her feelings. Help me, please.

Desperate In Grand Rapids

Dear D. in G.R.: I am continually bemused by the thousands of people who think they have an obligation to hold open-house for anybody who has spare time and knows how to lean on a doorbell.

The best way to prevent a neighbor from becoming a dropper-inner is by dropping out yourself. The first time someone drops in, let her know you are busy or on your way out — and ask her to please call first next time. As for the existing barnacle, if you don't want to tell her flat-out that she has made a pest of herself, don't answer the doorbell. (A one-way see-through peephole costs seven dollars.)

Dear Ann Landers: Several months ago our son married a girl we were not very fond of, but we made up our minds to accept her and we have done so. Jeff and his wife live 700 miles from here. Before they moved, Jeff promised that he or his wife would write us a short letter every week instead of spending money on the long distance telephone.

They have kept their word. I would like to know, however, why a 22-year-old college graduate would start a letter to her in-laws with "Hello" and close with "So long for now." Can you explain this, please? My husband and I are baffled.

Riverside Readers
Dear Riv: It's obvious the girl is evading the traditional "Dear _____" because you are not dear to her and she is letting you know it. Her casual close is a device for skirting the customary sentimental sign-off.

I hope the relationship improves, for your son's sake. I can tell the Arctic breezes from here.

Dear Ann Landers: You sometimes change your advice when your readers convince you you've made a mistake. I hope you will reconsider your answer to the woman who asked if she should tell her best friend that her husband is cheating.

I think it's stinking for the wife to be kept in ignorance while everyone else is whispering behind her back. What kind of friendship is it to keep you eyes covered, your ears plugged and your mouth shut?

A friend of mine has been cheated on like crazy for three months. Her husband is a doctor and he is having an affair with the nurse in his office. Everyone knows it but the man's wife. I haven't told her because my husband has made me promise I wouldn't. He says you are against telling the wife, too. Please change your views, Ann. I want to tell her as an act of kindness.

Des Moines
Dear D.M.: Don't do her any favors. It's a hundred-to-one bet she knows and is playing dumb so she can hold her head up. Permit her this dignity.

"The Bride's Guide," gives you the facts from the initial announcement to the last bill and who should pay it. To receive your copy, write to Ann Landers, in care of this newspaper, enclosing a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope and 35 cents in coin.

Primaries end like good fight

By United Press International
The 1972 presidential preference primaries are ending like the final round of an evenly matched prize fight — two men, toe to toe, slugging it out. The decision will come Tuesday from three million or more California voters.

The contestants, Sens. George S. McGovern of South Dakota and Hubert H. Humphrey of Minnesota, are the survivors of a crowded field of Democratic paper tigers and dark horses that began campaigning last winter in New Hampshire for their party's presidential nomination.

The winner in California will be the favorite, or at least an even bet, to win the nomination next month in Miami Beach.

There are six other Democrats running in California and presidential primaries in three other states on Tuesday, but the McGovern-Humphrey battle for the 271 delegates to be won in California dominates everything else.

The other presidential primaries are in New Jersey, South Dakota and New Mexico. In addition, Iowa, Mississippi and Montana are holding primaries for congressional and state offices, but not to test presidential popularity or to choose convention delegates.

The outcome in California will be more politically significant, if less dramatic, than its primary results in 1968, when Sen. Robert F. Kennedy beat Sen. Eugene McCarthy. For the few hours after the primary until he was murdered, Kennedy had propelled himself to within striking distance of the Democratic nomination. But Humphrey wasn't in that California test, and Kennedy would have had a stiff convention battle on his hands had he lived.

There is a man on the sidelines this year, too. Gov. George C. Wallace of Alabama is not on the California ballot, but after he was shot and partially paralyzed last month, his supporters began a write-in campaign. He won't win, but his showing will be carefully noted in view of his earlier strong runs in the primaries before his attempted assassination.

The others on the California ballot are casualties of earlier primaries.

Democratic Sens. Edmund S. Muskie of Maine and Henry M. Jackson of Washington, who dropped out of primary campaigning, remain as convention contenders but are far from being favorites. Other official candidates in California are Mayors John V. Lindsay of New York and Sam Yorty of Los Angeles, Rep. Shirley Chisholm of New York and McCarthy.

There also is a Republican primary. President Nixon and Rep. John Ashbrook of Ohio are on the ballot. Nixon is favored.

Coming up to the last round of primaries, McGovern had 511 committed delegates, more than one-third of the 1,509 needed to win the nomination. Wallace has 312; Humphrey, 291, and Muskie, 165. The other candidates have 125 delegates among them.

Whether McGovern or Humphrey wins the California test, the result seems likely to erase one embarrassment to the party. Though second in delegate strength, Wallace has a long lead in popular votes, a peculiarity caused by the size of the states and the turnout at the primaries he entered. But California, which cast about three million Democratic primary votes in 1968, probably will put both senators ahead of the governor.
